

---

Contents

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS	xi
I. INTRODUCTION	1
II. THE BIG PICTURE: CONSCIOUSLY CHOOSING WHAT YOUR COURSE WILL AIM TO ACCOMPLISH	2
A. The Broad Range of Possible Objectives	2
B. Choosing a Manageable Number of Objectives	4
C. Implications of the Choices You Make	6
III. PREPARING A NEW COURSE	7
A. Initial Steps	7
1. Gaining a Mastery of the Subject: What to Read	7
2. Funneling Ideas and Materials, Topic by Topic, into a Teaching Outline for the Entire Course	9
3. Using “Shadow Sources”	10
B. Choosing a Book	10
1. Don’t Automatically Choose the Most Popular Book, the Most Interesting Book, or the Book That Your Teacher Used	12
2. Don’t Base Your Decision on the First Few Chapters of a Book	13
3. Remember That It’s Easier to Add Material Than to Subtract It	14
4. Is the Book Organized in a Way That Will Confuse Students or Conflict with Your Vision of the Course?	15
5. Is the Book Written from an Ideological or Pedagogical Perspective with Which You’re Uncomfortable?	16
6. Are You a Long-Case Teacher or a Short-Case Teacher?	17
7. Will Students Find the Text or Notes in the Book to Be Unintelligible?	18
8. Does the Book Have a Teacher’s Manual — and, If So, Is It Any Good?	20

C. Designing a Syllabus	21
1. Constructing Your Reading Assignments	21
a. Don't Try to Cover Too Much Ground	21
b. Identifying the Topics to Be Included in Your Course: What to Cover When You Can't Cover Everything	22
c. Ordering the Progression of Topics: Logical Isn't Necessarily Pedagogical	24
d. Avoiding the "Marbury Gap"	25
e. Waiting for the Right Time to Address Theory or Policy	26
f. Don't Tie Yourself Down to Covering Particular Pages on Particular Dates	28
2. What Else Should Be Included in Your Syllabus?	28
IV. IN THE CLASSROOM: OVERARCHING PRECEPTS	29
A. Play the Role	29
B. Find Your Own Voice	30
C. Don't Be "Generic" — Inject Something of Yourself into the Course	30
D. Be Transparent	31
E. Create a Classroom Atmosphere Conducive to Learning	32
F. Engage Your Audience	33
1. Tactical Use of the Seating Chart	33
2. Calling Upon Students at Random Versus the "Expert Panel" Approach	35
3. Other Ways to Encourage Preparation and Participation	38
G. Read Your Audience	40
H. Identify One or More Themes That You Will Weave Through the Course	41
I. The Bottom Line: Teaching Legal Analysis	41
V. IN THE CLASSROOM: THE FIRST DAY	42
A. Setting the Tone	42
1. Let Them Know You Care	42
2. Establish Your Expectations	42
B. Suggestions for Starting Things Off	43
1. The Introductory Problem That Foreshadows

---

Themes or Doctrines Central to Your Course	43
2. Tabula Rasa: An Exercise in Creating the Law “from Scratch”	45
3. The Goodyear Blimp Overview: Taking Students on a Doctrinal “Fly-Over” Before Covering the Same Ground on Foot	46
VI. IN THE CLASSROOM: DAY-TO-DAY TEACHING TECHNIQUES	47
A. Why It Is Unrealistic to Expect Students to     Learn Everything by Induction	47
B. Scripting Discussion Flow	48
C. “Stay Back, Then Quick”	49
D. How to Handle Class Questions	50
E. How to Use Hypotheticals and Problems	51
F. Special Techniques for First-Year Students	53
1. “Case Dissection” Exercises: Teaching Legal Analysis by Breaking an Opinion Down into Its Component Parts	53
2. Legal Analysis from the Top Down and the Bottom Up	54
G. Right After Class, Make Notes of What Did and Didn’t Work	57
VII. Using Technology to Support Your Teaching	57
A. Visual Aids in the Classroom	57
B. Creating a Web Page for Your Class	59
VIII. CONDUCTING THE COURSE REVIEW SESSION	62
IX. THE SENSITIVE INTERVAL BETWEEN THE FINAL CLASS AND THE DAY OF THE EXAM	63
X. CREATING THE EXAM	65
XI. GRADING THE EXAM	69
XII. REVIEWING THE EXAM	70
XIII. CONCLUSION	72
ENDNOTES	73